Interpersonal Skills for Professional Law Enforcement

The rationale behind this 16 hour course is based upon the need of the average officer to improve their ability to interact with the public. By improving communication officers can reduce the likelihood of unnecessarily escalating situations, creating confusion between officers and the public, along with improving the public's confidence in the officer's abilities. The attending officers will have an improved appreciation of their ability to interact with the public through the lecture and interactive exercises. The officer will be able to participate in classroom discussion about improving communication and how the public's perception affects how professional they appear. This course will better prepare officers for interacting in a variety of environments.
