Blue Shield Tactical Systems delivers practical, legally defensible training that strengthens both officer capability and community trust. The 16-hour SAFER Women's Self-Defense Instructor Course equips officers with a complete, ready-to-teach program built around simple, effective principles that emphasize awareness, avoidance, boundary-setting, and safe escape over prolonged physical engagement.

This course prepares officers to teach civilians in a way that is realistic, confidence-building, and liability-aware. Participants learn not only the physical skills but also the instructional methodology required to deliver the curriculum safely to mixed-skill groups. This program also incorporates scenarios with documentation and a department student release form. The program covers:

- Awareness and prevention strategies that reduce risk before physical contact occurs
- Civilian-appropriate articulation of force and decision-making
- Simple, high-percentage physical skills designed for real-world application
- Modern safety tools, technology, and communication strategies
- Teaching methods that support diverse learning styles and community demographics

Agencies frequently receive requests for practical self-defense training that builds confidence without creating unnecessary risk. The SAFER program provides a structured, flexible, and legally sound curriculum officers can deliver immediately upon certification, enhancing community policing efforts and strengthening rapport with the public. This 16-hour instructor, two-year certification course ensures officers can confidently teach the SAFER model and empower their communities with skills that are accessible, effective, and grounded in real-world safety principles.

What will you receive when you attend:
